

PET PORTRAIT PHOTOGRAPHY

Pets are important members of the family, and that has certainly been the case in our family.

There have been cats and dogs in my life for as long as I can remember. We have bred both pedigree cats and dogs. Over the years, they have been subject to the camera.

Photographing animals takes patience and an appreciation that they probably don't want to be there (especially cats). It is important to know when to walk away and have a cuppa, whilst the subject does something else for a wee while before coming back to the matter in hand.

Our portraits can be both formal and informal. Show dogs need a more formal pose to show off their lines, but otherwise they can be out or indoors depending on what you, the owner requires.

Cats, well they're cats, and you have to go with the flow. Catch as catch can.

In the main, we are happy to come to you as your pet will be more relaxed in its own surroundings.

Outlined below are our pet portrait packages

A close-up, high-quality photograph of a cat's face, focusing on its striking blue eyes and the texture of its fur. The cat has a mix of grey, brown, and white fur. The background is a soft, out-of-focus light color.
